

An ultramodern building of imposing size welcomes visitors of Rubinetterie Bresciane, a company of the Bonomi Group that also includes Valpres, specialising in steel and cast iron ball valves for the industrial and Oil&Gas industries, and Valbia, manufacturer of electric and pneumatic actuators. A state-of-the-art factory unlike any other on the national manufacturing landscape that opened in 2014 with Prime Minister Matteo Renzi, the Minister of Labour Giuliano Poletti and the President of Confindustria Giorgio Squinzi in attendance, intended for the production of ball valves and fittings in brass on a surface area of 40,000 square meters indoors. “The plant was created with the goal of reducing energy consumption while maintaining high levels of safety and has been certified in class A”, says Carlo Bonomi, who, with his brother Aldo, is firmly at the helm of the Group. “A major investment in which we believed strongly, precisely because the third generation has successfully joined our Group for some years now. Something that means continuity for the company, guaranteed by Alessandra, Mario, Marta, Massimo and Monica, our children”, continues Aldo Bonomi. Bonomi is a Group with a long history: Rubinetterie Bresciane was established in 1901, while in 1966, “we were among the first manufacturers to produce ball valves in two pieces, a system that today everyone uses”, the owners point out. Among the added values of the Group from Gussago is the offer of the widest range of valves that are 100% made in Italy, with a widespread distribution network both in Italy and abroad, which accounts for 55% of the Group’s sales, worth a total 100 million Euros. “The turning points in our entrepreneurial path have been several. First of all, one company has spawned three other companies - states Aldo Bonomi. Then, over the years we successfully ventured into industry and Oil&Gas, without ever abandoning our consolidated business in the plumbing sector. Finally, in 2007 my brother and I acquired 100% of the company, previously shared with the various family members”. The Bonomi Group is a thriving business, very proud to be Italian, rooted in the territory but export-oriented, which always offers new solutions with a passion that is renewed in time. “The continual research and experimentation in the distribution of water, gas and the industrial sector has allowed us to expand our product portfolio so as to be able to offer a vast assortment of crimped connection, quick-coupling systems”.

With three locations, four production units and 320 employees, the Group’s valves are marketed and installed in all countries of the world, particularly in Northern Europe and North America. “And of course in Italia, where we are investing further in the manufacturing plants of Valbia and Valpres. In the near future we aim to implement the industrial and Oil&Gas sectors: we already are the only ones to produce in all these areas, in addition to plumbing, but we will continue to grow even more”, Aldo and Carlo Bonomi are proud to conclude.

close
up
text by Elena Marzorati
photo by
Elisa Casanova

The valve of growth

A constant evolution in time, the fruit of research and business continuity

From left: Aldo and Carlo Bonomi